Her broad practice extends across commercial and public law, and she has acted for and against corporations, government, and individuals. Roxanne appears both led and unled before state and federal courts and tribunals.

Roxanne joined the Bar in October 2017, reading with Robert Craig KC.

Roxanne's commercial practice incorporates all areas of commercial litigation, including: corporate and consumer law; banking and finance; equity and trusts; professional liability; regulatory matters; and Royal Commission work.

As part of her public law practice, Roxanne is regularly briefed by both State and Commonwealth departments and agencies in litigious matters, and to provide advice. She has particular experience in matters involving the compulsory acquisition of land, and associated claims for compensation.

Roxanne has also acted for prosecuting agencies (Office of Public Prosecutions and Australian Federal Police), and has conducted unled witness examinations on behalf of those agencies.

Roxanne is a member of the Commercial Bar Association, she participated in the Corporate Counsel Pilot Program, and she has served on the Bar's Health and Wellbeing Committee.
